

The Authors

GEORGE M. GUTHRIE, the principal author, was co-director of the Ateneo-Penn State Basic Research Program, a three-year (July 1966-June 1969) social research undertaking which was designed to study the impact of modernization in the Philippines. Dr. Guthrie was also director of the study of urbanization and changes in values and motives (APS/BRP Project Four), the research on which this report is based. He is presently a professor of psychology at The Pennsylvania State University and has served as an assistant director of the Penn State Philippine Peace Corps Project. Among Dr. Guthrie's other major publications are Child Rearing and Personality Development in the Philippines, of which he is co-author, and Six Perspectives on the Philippines, which he edited.

FORTUNATA M. AZORES, a research associate in the urbanization and values study, has an M.A. in linguistics from the Ateneo de Manila University and an A.B. in business from the Southern Methodist University in Dallas, Texas.

MELITON B. JUANICO served as deputy director of the study of Filipino cognitive mapping (APS/BRP Project One) as well as a research assistant in Dr. Guthrie's urbanization and values study. He has a Bachelor of Science in Education from the Iloilo College of the University of the Philippines.

MARIA PILAR S. LUNA, a research assistant in the urbanization and values study, is presently pursuing an M.A. in Asian Studies at the University of the Philippines. She has a B.S. in foreign service from the same institution.

TAGUMPAY P. TY, also a research assistant in the urbanization and values study, has a B.S. in pre-medicine and an A.B. in sociology from the University of the East, Manila.

* * *

The research on which this paper is based was part of the Ateneo-Penn State Basic Research Program, sponsored by the United States Office of Naval Research, with The Pennsylvania State University as prime contractor (Nonr-656[37]).