

ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

David Wurfel is Professor Emeritus of political science at the University of Windsor and Senior Research Associate at the Joint Centre for Asia Pacific Studies of York University and the University of Toronto.

Remigio E. Agpalo is Professor Emeritus of political science at the University of the Philippines. He is the founding president of the Philippine Political Science Association.

Yoshiko Nagano is professor at the Faculty of Foreign Studies of Kanagawa University, Yokohama. Her article is part of a larger study on Philippine banking history during the American period under the Overseas Research Program of Kanagawa University in 1988-1999.

Grace Gorospe-Jamon is associate professor of political science at the University of the Philippines-Diliman. Her article is based on her doctoral dissertation completed in 1999.

Rizal Buendia is assistant professor of political science at De La Salle University, Manila.

Jorge Tigno is assistant professor of political science at the University of the Philippines-Diliman.

Herman Joseph S. Kraft is assistant professor of political science at the University of the Philippines-Diliman.

Manuel C. Difuntorum is assistant professor of political science at the University of the Philippines-Diliman.

Diana J. Mendoza is assistant professor of political science at the Ateneo de Manila University.