Information for Contributors

Categories. For purposes of its placement within an issue of the PSR, a manuscript approved for publication will be classified as an article, a brief communication, a research note, a news item, or a book report.

An article will be distinguished from a brief communication or a research note principally on grounds of its completeness (or degree of finish) and/or its complexity. Length is not a primary consideration in this distinction.

The PSR distinguishes four kinds of book report, namely, the book listing, the book notice, the book review, and the review article. An elaboration of these classifications can be found in Volume 19 (1-2), January-April 1971.

Style. In general, we follow the norms of the Chicago Manual of Style (12th edition, revised; Chicago and London: University of Chicago Press, 1969) and of Kate Turabian's Manual for Writers (3rd edition, revised; Chicago and London: University of Chicago Press, 1967). However, it should be noted that source references without substantive content are made in running text, not in notes, by inserting within parentheses the author's name, year of publication, and page(s) referred to. The bibliographic data to accompany this brief reference will be placed under References at the end of the article.
